

Find Portland's Bell

Leading To Belief That
Steamer Foundered Off
Cape Cod

New England's No. 1 marine mystery was a step nearer solution Wednesday with the disclosure that divers have recovered the 65-pound bell of the long-lost steamer Portland.

Edward Rowe Snow, Boston Harbor historian, revealed that the finding of the 18-inch bell bearing the word Portland proved that the mystery ship definitely had been located. The ill-fated steamer went down with all 176 persons aboard during the great blizzard of '98, while enroute from Boston to Portland.

The bell was salvaged nine miles northeast of Cape Cod, under 132 feet of water where divers have been operating since May 27, Snow said. Two divers and four tenders will work on the vessel every weekend as long as grappling operations are financially possible. The treasure hunt for $18,000 worth of uncut jewels, believed in the ship's safe, is sponsored by the Portland Associates, a group intent on solving the half-century-old mystery.

Kennedy Crane, George B. Wood, Arthur F. Lamb and Seth Low have returned from a few days of fishing at Moosehead Lake.

On Sale Tomorrow

Automobile Use Tax Stamps,
What They're For, and Their Necessity

The new $5 Automobile Use Tax Stamps will be placed on sale in all Post Offices tomorrow. The law requires the owner of every motor vehicle which is used upon the highways to buy this stamp and to display it on the vehicle beginning July 1, 1946.

The law provides penalties for failure to pay this tax. To protect themselves against unnecessary penalties, owners of motor vehicles are advised not to be misled by false rumors alleging that this tax has been repealed.

Collector of Internal Revenue, Augusta, Me. will fill mail orders when accompanied by cash, money orders or certified checks. Personal checks cannot be accepted for the purchase of revenue stamps.

The law requires that the stamp be prominently displayed on the motor vehicle on and after July 1, 1946. Where possible, the stamp should be placed on the windshield as recommended by the proper officials of each State.

To protect themselves against loss or theft, motorists are advised to keep a separate record of the serial number which appears on each stamp. Motorists also are asked to write on the back of the stamp the make, model, serial number and State license number of the vehicle.

Corp. Harlan K. Rollins, on a 15-day delay enroute, from Las Vegas, Nevada, to Lincoln, Neb., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton V. Rollins in Rockland. He is to take an advanced course of training as a command gunner.

Loss Exaggerated

Production Of Pheasants At State Game Farm To Be
"Almost Normal"

Tireless work on the part of employees of the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game, plus the help of sportsmen will result in an almost normal production of pheasants at the State Game Farm in Gray instead of "an almost total loss" that threatened this year's production Commissioner George J. Stoble reveals.

When the recent heavy snowstorm hit Maine, electricity was cut off in incubators containing 10,000 eggs. Despite frantic efforts of attendants who set up stoves in the incubator buildings and kept them red hot for 52 hours the hatch was almost a total loss, Stoble said.

Last week, disaster struck again when fire destroyed half of a 220 foot brooder house, 1,000 young birds and many of the brooders. By heroic work employees saved 2,000 other young birds that were in the house and transferred them to a storehouse which they converted into a new brooder house. Scouring the countryside, they have obtained the loan of brooders that will partially take care of needs. Priorities for new brooders to meet the emergency are being sought.

One of the largest sportsmen's clubs has agreed not only to hatch eggs for the department but to rear young pheasants. One individual will take 500 chicks and rear them until they are large enough to release.

Nothing daunted by hard luck that has kept them working days, nights and Sundays, for several weeks, employees expect that with the hatching of eggs laid by breeders since the disasters production this year will be between 7,000 and 8,000 birds, only a slight decline from normal production.

Rockland Lawyer Sued

Is Named As A Defendant in Unique Case In Portland
Superior Court

Portland papers Wednesday and Thursday carried an account of a suit filed by Virginia Steele of that city against Charles T. Smalley, Rockland attorney, for the recovery of damages because the defendant, as she alleges, failed to advise her that a suit resulting from an automobile accident should be prosecuted within a year.

Interviewed yesterday Mr. Smalley stated that Miss Steele, while convalescing at the home of a local relative, consulted him about her rights and was advised to wait until her surgeons could determine the probable length of her disability before commencing suit.

Returning to her Portland home she retained a member of the Cumberland Bar who arranged a compromise settlement in her behalf and constituted the present action.

The Maine statutes contain a provision, with which all attorneys are familiar, that actions of tort for injuries caused by the operation of motor vehicles under the supervision of the Public Utilities Commission shall be commenced within one year.

It is a subdivision of a chapter relating to "Motor Vehicles Carrying Passengers for Hire" and Mr. Smalley contends it does not apply to collisions involving freight trucks as was the case when Miss Steele was injured. The law was passed in 1925 and has never been the subject of adjudication.

In Portland Wednesday Mr. Smalley filed an answer which will result in a transfer of the controversy to the Supreme Court which convenes in Augusta in September.

The question involved has aroused much interest among the lawyers throughout the State and several have expressed the hope this case will definitely decide whether the legislature intended to implicitly include carriers of freight when the original law was enacted.

Golden Anniversary

Puritan Rebekah Lodge of Tenant's Harbor Has a
Notable Night

The month of May was of special significance to Puritan Rebekah Lodge, No. 59, of Tenant's Harbor, because of its golden anniversary which was very happily observed. St. George Lodge, I.O.O.F., and the members' wives were invited, together with several other special guests, and there was a large attendance of members as well.

The history of the lodge which was to be compiled by Mrs. Etta Harris, Past District Deputy President, was cancelled because of her illness, however, many reminiscences were related by a few of the older members. Remarks were also made by several others, some of which were humorous and some of more serious nature, but all most interesting and impressive.

A most delicious banquet was served, the tables being tastefully arranged and in the center of which was a three-tiered anniversary cake made by Mrs. Mary Monaghan and prettily decorated with 50 tiny golden candles, surrounded by tall golden ones, making the centerpiece very attractive. Favors were three golden links and the napkins were also of gold and white.

Attractive salads and other delicacies were appealing to the eye as well as to the taste. Mrs. Jessie Harris, the present District Deputy President, was toastmaster and she proved herself well qualified in that capacity.

Dancing completed the evening's entertainment, with Mrs. Mabel Wilson at the piano, and Henry Lowell and Wilho Egland saxophonists. It was a jolly good time for all present and everyone commenced the efforts of the Noble Grand, Mrs. Mary Marriott and her committee which comprised Mrs. Jessie Harris, Mrs. Myrtle Taylor, Mrs. Mary Monaghan and Mrs. Daisy Davis, who made Puritan's golden anniversary a successful and happy occasion, one long to be remembered by both members and invited guests.

A Soldier's Letter

Arnold Childs Declares G.I.'s
Are Displeased With Way
War Ended

Germany, May 25. I suppose you celebrated the great day of Victory. Well, it was just another day for us and not a too pleasing one at that!

There is a lot of arguing among the boys over here. We are all much displeased with the way it ended. The Germans won the peace and are happy. We may have won the war but we certainly lost the peace. The German people are getting everything they want, just as they would have had they won the war.

The German prisoners of war are being discharged to go home, to work, be with their families, and we are trucking them to their homes. We American boys can't go home to work and to our folks. We are guarding and protecting the Germans from their enemies right now.

It is really a shame the way we are dealing with them. We roll through a town with our guns, and the citizens laugh at us. The people who once fought against us now have us working for them. So you see, that's why we American soldiers are wondering who won this war—we or they?

We are living in little pup tents out in the woods and in mud, while the Germans live in nice homes. Whenever we are quartered in town, we are under guard 24 hours around, so we can't look over the place or talk with its residents.

A few days ago a notice came out in the paper to the effect that all American troops must stand at attention whenever German high officers are present. How do you like that? We don't!

The boys over here are expressing their feelings so the people at home will know just how we feel about the war.

This letter is the truth as I have put it, and you would never be able to get the truth any other way. The radios and the papers are all propaganda. Don't let anyone tell you that we get all peaches and cream.

The Black Cat

(By The Roving Reporter)

There would seem to be no good reason why bananas cannot now be imported, but when word leaks out that a consignment has arrived at one of the local fruit stores the situation is a reminder of the memorable "Nine Cent Days" at the old Fuller-Cobb-Davis store.

It seems that the army will get its ice cream in eight new flavors this summer. Now for heaven's sake, don't keep us in suspense, what are they?

"Lord Timothy Dexter" will be the subject of Alton Hall Blackington's Yankee Yarn tonight. For the remainder of June these titles: 15, "The Rooster Who Digs Clams," 22, "Cape Cod's Most Haunted House," Woolcott; 29, "Mystery of the Mary Celeste."

"Ever see any weather like this?" is a query I hear almost every day. About to say "no" I suddenly remember that rainy June we had 20 or more years ago when it rained so constantly that Rockland was literally drowned out of the State Baseball League. Betcher John McGrath remembers it.

Reminiscent of the late John D. Rockefeller was the souvenir I received yesterday from my good Portland friend, Walter W. Morse. It will begin the "march of dimes."

"This will pass for an Indian Winter," remarked "Ted" Bird yesterday. And what better designation could have been given?

One year ago: The dragger Eugene H., built for Rhama E. Philbrick of Rockland was launched at Thomaston—Horatio W. Stevens, 93, died in Camden—Mrs. Gladys Thomas was chosen president of the Rockland Society for the Hard of Hearing for her sixth year—Charles Nathan Sleeper, 81, died in Rockland.

Rockland friends of Mrs. Janet Kulloch have received word that she and her husband, Capt. Ralph Kulloch have left Algiers and are now in Venice with plans calling for an immediate assignment in troubled Trieste.

"Coming Home." Author, Lester Cohen. Published by The Viking Press, New York.

One will read this novel, very true to the pictures drawn from the everyday life in our world, with disrupted emotions, with sympathy and sorrow; but with a feeling of pride in the one who comes home to find one woman and child for his keeping. It's a breath taking circumstance the young soldier faces, and stands up too. He faced the battlefield problems over there and over here with an honest purpose in his duty to a loving girl. They both play their parts with courage. This young couple have a hard problem. They had plenty of heartbreak before the young marine came home to protect his child and give to the sweet girl the name of wife.

It is a humanly moving novel in spite of a mistake in early moments before their parting. This is just a true picture of what might be in many of the future lives of our youths, as they take up the broken threads of activity and existence and try to piece them into smoothness.

[EDITORIAL]

LET'S NOT START ANYTHING

John M. O'Connell, Jr., managing editor of the Bangor Daily News, who has been producing a mighty readable column of first hand war news the past year, is back home with some rather pertinent views as to Russian domination. "The only thing that irritated me to any great extent during my stay in Europe" he says "was the kid-glove treatment accorded the Russians by our officials and allies. It may have been necessary when the armies were in there battling for victory but I can't see any further need for it. If our correspondents are going to be permitted to go to Berlin it's about time we knew it. I think Joe Stalin's coddling days should be over. He should be told that somebody else had something to do with winning this war."

Ask the average man's opinion as to who would be our chief opponent, in the unfortunate event of another world war and we believe you would find that it would not be Germany or Japan, but Russia. We were many years finding out that it would be Japan, and lived in a fool's paradise under the impression that such a thing could not be. Friendly relations with Russia must be maintained so long as it can be done with self-respect. It is very true that if it had not been for Russian valor and Russian persistence this country might have found the Germans and Japs invading our own shores, but it is equally true that had it not been for the support which this country gave Russia in the Stalingrad days the Soviets would probably have been compelled to knuckle, as they did in the first World War. But let's not put any unnecessary chips on our shoulders.

IS THE SKUNK STILL ALIVE?

About the only persons who have not almost forgotten Adolf Hitler are those who believe that he is still alive, hiding somewhere in an ingenious disguise. If alive it is safe to say that he is not dancing a jig, as he did in Brenner Pass in the early days of the war when everything looked so rosy for his ill-starred cause. Certainly he would find no cause for rejoicing in the dismemberment which Germany is now undergoing. The country which expected to rule the world now finds itself stripped of all powers, with its acreage sadly diminished. Its only mode of revenge for the present, at least, is the power of sabotage, which is unfortunately a factor in any country's existence.

IT IS NOT ALL ONE WAY

In soft sledding thus far, because both of the major parties are determined to do all in their power, to aid the man who accidentally became President. Mr. Truman is beginning to realize that after all this job of running a country like the United States is not all easy sledding. A slight straw is seen in the refusal of the House rules committee to budget P. E. O. legislation from its pigeonhole, and this despite the strong personal plea made by President Truman. Congress may lack the power and prestige of a Chief Executive but upon occasions it has been known to get its back up.

FIRST BLOOD FOR THE G.O.P.

The first balloting for a national position since the Presidential election took place in the Montana Second Congressional District a few days ago, and the result causes the Republicans to look forward to President Truman. Congress may lack the power and prestige of a Chief Executive but upon occasions it has been known to get its back up.

REFUSED TO OBEY HITLER

The report of the American Red Cross that more than 99 per cent of American prisoners of war in Germany have survived and are now on the way home gives further evidence of the wisdom and merit (in addition to the moral obligation) of American adherence to the Geneva Convention. For the Red Cross convincingly cites this adherence as a major factor in the protection of these men. Following disclosure of concentration camp atrocities, many individuals, failing to differentiate between such camps and the prisoner-of-war camps, demanded that the United States disregard the provisions of the Convention. It could not, of course, have done so without violating the pledge it took with 46 other nations and seriously endangering the lives of its own servicemen.

It is true that German treatment varied, and in the last chaotic weeks some Allied prisoners had to undergo forced marches and near starvation, and executions took place in one locality. But the War Department has on record innumerable instances where German knowledge of Anglo-American treatment of Nazi prisoners has saved the lives of hundreds of Allied men. Latest instance confirmed by returned American prisoners was the refusal of German Army commanders to carry out Hitler's order for the execution of all captured American and British fliers in retaliation for Allied bombing of German cities.

This is clear that what is needed is not a lowering of the standard of civilization through any departure from such international agreements as the Geneva Convention, but rather extension of the agreements to protect individuals from such atrocities as were practiced in the concentration camps. — Christian Science Monitor.

WORKING FOR VICTORY

Mrs. Lillian F. Joyce went to Boston yesterday to meet her son, T.Sgt. Roy E. Joyce, who arrived in New York Sunday on the Steamship "La Jume," and who went, with others, to Fort Devens, Mass. Mrs. Joyce and her son will remain in Boston until Saturday. Sgt. Joyce has been away from home three years. He was engineer in a Flying Fortress which was shot down over Holland, March 6, 1944 and had been a prisoner of war of Germany until liberated recently. He entered service in July 1942.

At a Southern England Port, Stephen F. Norwood, 33, seaman, first class, USNR, of Portland, was aboard the USS LST 294 when she dropped anchor in this harbor recently to complete her fiftieth round trip to the French coast since the Normandy landings last June. With other Navy landing ships operating in "the shuttle" she carried the troops and vehicles that brought victory in Europe. When there was no load for the Army, she delivered Allied trucks to ease the war-crippled French transportation system.

Casualties from the beaches made up last Summer's return loads and in the Fall there were prisoners of war to be evacuated. Now the 294 brings back to England airplane motors, trucks, tires and equipment from the battlefields to be repaired.

Norwood, son of Mrs. Ida Norwood, Route 2, Union, is a veteran of the Normandy invasion. Before enlisting in December, 1943, he attended Rockland High School and worked for the Bath Iron Works, his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Norwood, lives at 74 Revere street, Portland.

An Advanced Ninth Air Force Service Command Unit, Germany, Major General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, commanding general of the Ninth Air Force, has officially commended members of the Ninth Air Force Service Command team to which Sergeant Herbert R. Linnell of South Thomaston, is assigned, for "remarkably outstanding operational status in the maintenance of aircraft."

The commendation further states, "It is my desire that the men who are responsible for this excellent effort and accomplishment should receive my sincerest personal commendation. . . such zealous endeavor to 'keep 'em flying' will help speed the termination of this conflict."

Sergeant Linnell's organization was not only one of the first Ninth Air Force units to operate on the continent, but also the first to operate on German soil.

The son of Fred R. Linnell and Mrs. Sarah E. Roberts, Sgt. Linnell is now an aircraft mechanic with this team's air service squadron. He has been awarded two Bronze Service Stars for his participation in the Normandy and Northern France campaigns.

John Smith Lowe, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Lowe, Sr., of Rockland, arrived home Wednesday, having been discharged recently at Port

Devens, Mass. Private Lowe, who was a sergeant at the time he transferred to a combat unit, had 109 points. He went into service through the selective service system. April 24, 1942 and went overseas in September of that year. He was in Africa with the 9th division; in Italy with the 45th division; in France with the 82d airborne division and, finally with the 8th armored division of the 9th Army under General Simpson. Pvt. Lowe, when he went overseas, landed in Greenoch, Scotland, and after seeing much of Africa, Italy, France and into Germany as far as Cologne made his departure for home from the same port in Scotland. He arrived at Fort Patrick Henry, Newport News, Va., March 28. He spent his furlough with his wife, Mrs. Frances Quint Lowe, in Rockland and in Round Pond, reporting at Fort Devens, May 20. He has not decided just what he will do, but may return to Bath, where he was employed when Uncle Sam took him over.

Doing Good Work

Hundreds have looked over the samples of the work done by the students of the Industrial Arts and Vocational Department of Rockland High School, displayed in the window of the Central Maine. The exhibition will remain over the week-end. Dana C. Cummings is the head of the department.

Charles L. Grant directs the wood-working section, and the items on display include: three what-not shelves, serving tray, pin-up lamps, two plaques of Abraham Lincoln, the head of cast aluminum, combination knife rack and cutting board, two combination magazine racks and smoking stands, one of black walnut, and the other of mahogany; two taboret, two end tables; combination kitchen stool and step-ladder magazine rack, colonial lamp, modernistic lamp and a smoking stand, marine type. Particular attention is called to a salt and pepper shaker set, and original design made from shells of World War II. The wooden articles were made by pupils of the 8th grade and freshmen and sophomores of the High School.

Products of the metal working department, headed by Arthur R. Grinnell, are: an aluminum and brass ship lamp, with castings made by the students; two house jacks; wood working vise; rose reamers; taps, arbors, steel gears for lathes; drill press vise; tool workers' clamp; paper weight tap wrench; telescope jack; model house jack; plumb bob; center punches, centers for small lathes; depth gauge; tool makers' jacks; boring bar; ball-peen hammers; die stock; screwdrivers; centering attachments for drill presses; four-in-one screwdriver; small bench vise and letter openers. These articles were made by juniors and seniors of the High School.

Senator Brewster "Drops In" and Tells Of His European Visit

Senator Owen Brewster

Lions, at the meeting Wednesday, had the unexpected pleasure of hearing Senator Owen Brewster speak concerning his recent two weeks' visit to England, Germany and France. Senator Brewster, on his way from Castine, where he spoke Tuesday, to a speaking engagement at Old Orchard Beach the following night, dropped into the city, and thinking to make a call on his friend, Alvin W. Gregory, found that Mr. Gregory was at the Lions luncheon. The Senator, himself a Lion, hid himself to The Thordike and was given a place of honor at the head table and impressed into service as speaker for the day.

Declaring, after opening with remarks about how, "we talk only of billions in Washington these days," that the economic organization of the United States of America is what won the war, he said that "this has been a petroleum war, for more than one-half of the cargo sent across the Atlantic to Europe has been petroleum." Senator Brewster stated that a raid over Germany of 1000 bombers cost one and one-half billion dollars and that it was just what led Germany wide.

He told graphic stories of his visits to an underground factory, where just outside 20,000 workers had been buried. "The men of various countries, working in this particular factory, had long hours and were underfed, and not many ever left the location alive," Senator Brewster informed his hearers. "Germany is pretty well wiped out—Mannheim, one of the cities we visited, is 85 percent obliterated," he said, adding that, "the farm lands are in good condition."

"I am keen about getting France on its feet, but the problem of Germany is practically insoluble, and in Germany nobody knows the answer, and I question if any power on earth can get the Nazi system out, especially referring to the youth above four or five years of age," Senator Brewster declared. He thinks that the most of Germany will have a collectivist view, favoring totalitarianism.

Making reference to the President, without mentioning his name, Senator Brewster wholeheartedly said, "I have a great deal of confidence in him."

He strongly urged that the United States have a far better diplomatic front declaring that "the first line of defense is the State department." Senator Brewster was introduced by Mr. Gregory, and was given an ovation at the close of his highly interesting talk.

Rev. Ernest O. Kenyon presided in the absence of King Lion Dr. Bradford F. Burgess. William Weir of West Medford, Mass., was a guest and Maurice Sullivan of Baltimore, formerly of Rockland, was a visitor. The club voted to donate $10 to the Boy Scouts of America campaign.

Officers nominated at the May 2 meeting were unanimously elected as follows: Sam J. Savitt, King Lion; Frank P. Harding and Gerald S. Grant, Sr. vice presidents; Elwood Hodgkins, secretary; Howard P. Crockett, treasurer; Arthur S. Jordan, Lion tamer; Wilbur F. Senter, tail twister and Dr. Bradford F.

Looking Ahead
with
Charles H. MacDonald

It is not easy for anyone to make a fortune, and even if it were, as an inheritance it might prove disastrous. But an income is another matter. Paid regularly month after month without variation, it is a fortune which can never be dissipated, never lost in hazardous ventures.

These plain facts cannot be overlooked by the man who wants security for his family in the event of his death. He knows he must leave a minimum income for his wife until the children are self-supporting, there must be provision for rent, food, clothes and schooling, and there must be freedom from anxiety for the mother, especially when her care and influence are so necessary in the formative years of childhood.

Fortunately, all these benefits are possible through the Sun Life Family Income Plan, an economical scheme of protection that all may enjoy. This comprehensive plan leaves no doubts in the mind, no fears as to loss of capital, no administration cares and no delays.

Let me show you how easily the Sun Life Family Income Plan can be adapted to meet your requirements. Just call or write:

Fast Moving Dollars

They Make Times Good the Local Townsend Clubs Are Told

Townsend Plan Clubs No. 1 and No. 2, joined Wednesday night to hear an address by John H. Weir of California. The meeting was held in Spear Hall. Mr. Weir, who is making a nationwide tour, was introduced by Mrs. Myron C. Drinkwater of Club No. 1. Mrs. Charles M. Cook, president of Club No. 1, presided.

Mr. Weir, thoroughly informed concerning the Townsend National Recovery Plan, from its inception, recited many incidents which have occurred, especially in the west, relative to legislative action, and the moves made by opponents as well as proponents.

Declaring that "when there are slow, lazy dollars, there are poor times, and when there are fast moving dollars, times are good," he said that 28 States had benefited from the war boom, and that we will run into trouble at the close of the war.

Referring to the Social Security plan of the government, he said that nothing had been done to correct errors since 1935, and pointed out its inadequateness. He said that the Townsend plan, which is an insurance and purchasing plan, would, in its operation, make a better working economic program. He drew smiles from his audience when he stated that a cabinet member of the Federal Government said that proponents of the plan were "the lunatic fringe of American Society." Mr. Weir, an engaging speaker with a pleasing personality, said that the Senate was 53 percent for plan, but that he did not know just how the House of Representatives stood.

Following the session Mr. Weir was entertained for lunch at a nearby restaurant.

What, Another Pest?

Flea Beetle Making Its Appearance In Maine Blueberry Fields

Flea beetles in large numbers have been found feeding on blueberry plants in Washington County, according to reports received from the Washington County Extension agent, W. Edwin Potter of Machias, and some growers by Frank H. Lathrop, entomologist, Maine Agricultural Experiment Station. The extent of the infestation is not yet known, but Dr. Lathrop suggests that growers keep close watch of their blueberry fields so that they may take action if necessary.

The last general outbreak of the blueberry flea beetle was in 1936. When the beetles are numerous, they completely strip the leaves from the plants and ruin the crop. The remedy is to dust infested areas with the same dust that is used in controlling the blueberry fruit fly.

Most blueberry fields are now in full bloom and poisonous dusts should not be applied until nearly all the blossom petals have fallen. warns Lathrop. If dust is applied while the plants are in bloom, bees and other pollinating insects will be killed and the berry crop may be reduced. Usually the flea beetles are concentrated in small patches in the blueberry field and the whole field need not be dusted.

"Cigs" For Fishermen

Rep. Bird and Cong. Smith Take the Matter Up With Admiral Land

Representative Frederic H. Bird, who took up with Representative Margaret Chase Smith the matter of cigarette supply for fishing vessels, has received the following reply:

"I conferred with Admiral Land of the War Shipping Administration and asked for a confirmation of the conversation which I am enclosing herewith. You will note my suggestion in the last paragraph.

"Since your inquiry it has been announced there will be a great increase in the supply of cigarettes so it may that we are over this hurdle. I am sure the fishermen are entitled to anything that will make their trips more comfortable and pleasant."

Quoting from Admiral Land's reply to Mrs. Smith:

"The current shortage of cigarettes has affected shipping in common with all other activities and the supplying of cigarettes to ships under the jurisdiction of this Administration proved to be a major problem. The law requires that tobacco be carried in the ship chests of all merchant ships engaged in off-shore trade and we have been able to obtain cigarettes in moderate quantities for War Shipping Administration ships, tax free, as is permitted by law in foreign-going vessels."

"The War Shipping Administration (it will be noted, does not arrange for cigarettes for vessels other than those under its jurisdiction and the supply obtained for the coastwise vessels was by request to the several tobacco manufacturers on the basis of the war effort and in behalf of the crews of such coastwise ships. In the case of the fishing vessels it is suggested that the companies operating fishing fleets apply to the several manufacturers of cigarettes for the allotment of a reasonable quantity of cigarettes for the use of their vessels."

USELESS COWBOY

By ALAN LeMAY WNDU SERVICE

CHAPTER XVIII

George said dimly, "If it only wasn't for the climate of California..."

"He blames everything on the weather, and shrunk his joints or something," Melody explained this to Cherry. "He says California ain't a state at all—it's a dang fish tank. George, I'll buy you some liniment. Now shut up."

Melody had got hold of a knife and a piece of manzanita root, which he was carving into a mestook. It appeared to represent some kind of a fish face, but with a long nose, three legs, and wings. When Cherry saw that he appeared to be absorbed in his carving, she leaned against his shoulder, gradually, as if she hoped she would not be noticed.

"You see them shiny specks of dust?" Melody said to her, "dancing around in the air where the sun comes in? The feller don't live that can tell you how come that is. It can't be the sunshine causes it, because there's more of that outside, and you don't see any specks out there. But if you come back in a hundred years, then gold specks will still be dancing around in here, if the barn stands up that long."

"Oh, uh, that's right," Cherry said. "This place will burn tonight," Cherry said. Her voice was dead level and depressed, but with that same uncertainty under it. "This is the Rowntree fight all over again."

"If there had been a Rowntree fight," Melody amended. "I guess I forgot that for a minute."

Melody stopped carving on his mestook. He was thinking of old Mr. Rowntree, who might have laid her head down on his rifle, in the exact spot Cherry had showed him. He could picture that, just as plainly as if it had ever happened. And he could picture something else, that hadn't happened yet: He could see Cherry's head laid quiet on a bale of molyd, with the wavering firelight reflected on her spread-out hair.

"George," Melody said, "I ain't a-going to be able to git it done, I've went to work and felt down again. I kind of thought I would. But I had to try." "Try what?" Cherry asked. "He taken and set out to bust up Monte's wild bunch," George said. "He said he wanted to be some-body."

Cherry stared at Melody. "I reckon it was right silly," Melody said. "I see now that no such thing could be. But that wasn't why I rode Monte's saddle into Payneville."

"Then why?" "Melody looked at her mournfully, but without self-consciousness. "You was all tangled up in Monte's devilments," he said to her. "I could see there wasn't no way to talk sense into your head, gals being like they be. So, it seemed like the only way to get you out was just to bust up the whole thing."

"Is that why you rode down to Payneville, when you knew you ought to go over the hill?" "What did you think it was? Oh, I see. You thought it was the thousand dullers. . . . Well, it won't matter much, no more. The wild bunch is gitting busted, all right. But you're still in the middle of it, bad as bad can be. And there ain't no way to get you out of it, seemingly."

"I give up," George said. His words trailed off in such a blur that Cherry and Melody looked at each other. Cherry got her feet under her and moved to George's side, but without straightening up. She laid a hand on his forehead and looked uncertain; then placed her lips to his temple to see if there was fever there. Melody felt again that disarming surprise, that a woman should take pains over some old man whom she hardly knew.

Fever Creek was whining for water again, and Cherry took it to him. "Why does this happen to a man like me," he whimpered, "that would have fit 'em to a standstill? Why can't they hit a no-good punk like that Jones, that ain't worth his room to nobody?"

For once Cherry answered him in a tone that would have cut the hide off a mule. "He'll be hit soon enough," she said, "and when he is, you'll be flabbergasted—because you'll get a look at a man who can act a little different from a squaw papoose!"

There was quiet now for some little time. The widespread, tremendously overmanned posse was getting ready to try something else, but those within could not judge what it would be. Melody finished his job of carving on the plank, and he signaled Cherry to come to him.

his astounded eyes did not leave Melody.

Melody fired, without effect. He knew where his shot went. Even without seeing the splinters jump from the door jamb, he knew it wasn't any good. He was concentrating everything he had on putting a shot where he wanted it; but he never had any way of doing that, and he had no way now. He walked closer.

Instantly after Melody's first shot Monte fired; he fired from belt-lead, and he leaned into it, as if trying to put his weight behind the starting of the bullet. His whole body curved to it, with the effort of will that was behind the lead. Melody faltered, but he did not go down. He came ahead, walking steadily.

Melody fired again, and missed clean. A clear blaze of fury broke up the blank astonishment of Monte's face. He fired three times, crazily, as fast as he could drop the hammer. Melody jerked a little and swayed, but he kept his feet. He fired again, and his shot split the edge of the broken screen door.

This wasn't Monte, firing from the door, but a different proposition torn in two by enough crazy anger to poison a bull train. Melody saw that, and he didn't understand it, but he knew his chance. He knew he had a fraction of a second of time now, for he was standing in front of Monte Jarrod, and he was not dead. He fired, and put a bullet through the top of the door.

"Dear God," he whispered, and he was a prayer. "Dear God, dear God in heaven. . . . He put a shot into the kitchen, past Monte Jarrod. Monte had one cartridge left, and he sent it now; and Melody was his again, this time hard. He half spun, and dropped his weapon; but he didn't fall down. He caught himself, and stood for a moment on spread legs. It was only when he tried to catch up his gun out of the dust that he came down on his hands and knees. He groped about on all fours, and found his gun. Somehow he got up, stumbled forward two steps more, and cocked the gun.

A shot sounded behind him, and in the same instant a bullet said "Cousin!" directly in his ear. Monte Jarrod faltered forward into the gallery, all joints gone loose, as if everything was cut down at once. Melody could not believe it at first. When he had got it through his head he backed off watchfully, his heels dragging in the dirt. Lee Gledhill was still in action in the house; but Lee did not take him under fire.

George Fury was prone in the barn door, collapsed from a crawling position, the carbine in the dust by his hand. Melody said, "George, how many times I got to tell you—" He let it go, speech being considerable effort, and George being three-quarters out and not listening. Fever Creek was standing around stunned and useless, and Avery was just coming to his senses, but somehow Cherry and Melody got George Fury back into shelter.

"That's the first time," Melody said vaguely, "I ever knew George to fire left-handed. . . . The girl caught the carbine up, as if she were rescuing something alive. "You you imagine? Suddenly she dropped the carbine in the dirt, covered her face, and sat down. Melody stepped toward her, lurching a little; he reached out a hand, and touched her hair. "Don't touch me," she said, and Melody took his hand away. "Don't ever touch me!"

Melody Jones stepped back, looking befuddled. He swayed a little, and sat down slowly, his back against a bale. "Heck," he said. A little after that, Lee Gledhill walked out and surrendered, Lester Cotton taking over. At the heart of Payneville rose an unceasing tireless gabble, in the name of investigation, while everybody and his brother questioned Melvin Jones, alias Melody Jones, and forced him to answer, too, on pain of unhelpful consequences for three long everlasting weeks. . . .

They turned him loose at last, and he rode out to the Busted Nose morosely, nursing a grouse for almost the first time in his life. He still had one arm in splints; and he was bandaged in places, under his clothes. George Fury was still out there, for one reason, that there wasn't any way to move him. He was still flat on his back, and getting blanket-sore around the shoulder blades, but he was on the mend all right, to judge by his conversation.

"So you finally sobered up," were his first words to Melody. "They only just now cut me loose," Melody said glumly. "And you already know that, without I said it."

"What all went on down there? How many counts was you accused of?" "And said, 'Goodbye!'" "They brung an open verdict. That's the legal way of putting that they ended up confused, kind of."

"I know that much, you nump! But what happened?" "Listen, George," Melody said wearily, "my ears is worse than I. I can't stand to hear all that stuff over again, not even in my own voice. You can go down and read the damn records some time. Or else send down some pack mules and git 'em hauled up here. Allow for a short ton."

"It beats me," George said. "I never see such a town for kicking away their opportunity. I'd of swore they'd hang you. What did they say when they loosened you?" "And said, 'Goodbye!'" George gave it up then. He glared at Melody for a while. "But the reward—you any way got the reward?" "What reward?" George Fury whimpered inarticulately. "Oh, the thousand dullers," Melody remembered. "Thet. Well, they

"What—Why, yew befewled?" "I just didn't figure it was coming to me, George. You can go git it yourself, when you're able. I'm sick of them jiggers."

It was some time before George could speak. He turned his face to the wall, chewed his mustache, and prayed for the strength to get up and kill Melody. He was under control, though, when he turned back. "After I turned back the thousand dullers," Melody said, "they come up with a bill for my board. Of course I couldn't pay it. So they held me in the jail three days more, on a charge of vacancy. Or something like that."

Freed From Prison
Friends here who remember Dr. and Mrs. Charles O. Dalrymple, now residents of Worcester, Mass., will be pleased to learn that their youngest son, Pfc. Paul Dalrymple, reported missing in Germany, Jan. 21, was liberated by the British, April 20, and expects to be with his parents at their cottage at Port Clyde about the middle of this month.

When taken prisoner, Pfc. Dalrymple was with the 301st Infantry of [Pfc.] Third Army. Taken from one prison camp to another, he was at Stalag 11B, when liberated. The British treated him very well and he was flown to Brussels, Belgium, and then to France to the 77th Field Hospital, where he was located from April 30 to May 21, receiving treatment, for he had overaten, following his liberation. Coming out of the hospital, May 22, he was given a pass during which he visited Paris, and Le Havre.

Pfc. Dalrymple attended grade schools here, and was graduated from the Worcester High School, and attended the Clark University previous to his enlistment. He studied engineering with an ASTP unit at Boston College, and was sent overseas in July 1944, going into action the following September.

He was awarded the combat Infantryman's badge. His older brother, Eugene, has received an honorable discharge recently to continue his studies at Tufts Dental College. His parents have been with Rev. and Mrs. Will Kelley in this town for a few days, and will be located for the Summer at their cottage at Port Clyde.

INTIMATE VIEWS OF VINALHAVEN

History, Home Life and Personal Recollections

By SIDNEY L. WINSLOW

Since sending in last week's installment of Vinalhaven history I have procured the full list of names of the girls who made up the group that were on board the Ship of State in the Centennial Parade.

They were: Lena Vinal, Emma Roberts, E. v. a. Noyes, Emma Crockett, Maud Smith, Cora Hopkins, Lucy Roberts, Clyde Libby, Edith Manson, Mabel Thurston, Edith Vinal, Louise Roberts, Minnie Burns, Grace Roberts, Jennie Harrow, Nina Roberts, Clara Colson, Rose Urquhart, Love Urquhart, Mertie Combs, Alice Monroe, Alice Hopkins, Lola Shirley Agnes Carver, Carro Littlefield, Maud Libby, Carro Hopkins, Winnie Gerald, Annie Combs, Louise Carver, Lida Calderwood, Jeannie Griffith, Jessie Low, Emma Littlefield, Lida Wentworth, Louise Arey, Lora Arey, Lillian Ladd, Blanche Carver, Louise Hopkins, Blanche Hamblin, Alice Tucker, Louise Talbot, Master James Johnston was at the tiller.

The Boy Continentals who marched in the parade were: Bert Flitner, orderly sergeant, Maurice Lemond; color bearer, Frank Wharf; corporals, Richard Rhodes, Leroy Bodwell; drummer, Chaney Hall, Charles Bonam, Walter Roberts, Irving Fifield, Del Williamson, Fred Lemond, Llewellyn Vinal, Will Davidson, Ernest Smith, Harvey Hall, Bert Davidson, Alton Roberts, Herbert Carver, Ralph Combs, Davis Green, John Mendall, Ralph Bodwell, Bert Porter, Joe Doane, Bert Bowan.

In 1779 John Perry, one of the British early settlers, shot two British soldiers who were robbing his cornfield. This historical incident was represented on a big float. In the cornfield, which was made realistic with standing corn, stumps and underbrush, two British soldiers in uniform (Joe Porter and George Kossuth) were roasting corn over a fire, while behind a neighboring stump John Perry (Fred Snow) in historic Continental uniform was aiming an old Revolutionary flintlock. It was well carried out and met with great applause from the spectators.

This Indian scene was represented by Will Merrithew and Brad Grant, two prominent men who were also outstanding participants in local celebrations. It was one of the best features of the celebration and certainly one of the most amusing.

A wigwam in a clump of bushes was occupied by a chieftain and his squaw, the chieftain, with a bow and arrow was shooting at a live fox that scampered about a nearby tree. The affair was undoubtedly extremely realistic to the fox and once during his scampering he managed to break loose from the tree and disappeared like a streak of light in the direction of adjacent woods which he undoubtedly found much more to his liking than taking part in a pageant.

His career, however, was brought to a close the following Winter when he was shot, near the Guilford Young place (known today as Rabbit Lodge) by a local huntsman. His identity as the "Centennial Fox" being established by a portion of the chain with which he had been secured to the tree in the centennial parade and which encircled his neck at the time of his death.

A feature that was not on the program but which caused great furore among the children was the merry-go-round which had been set up near the spot where our public library now stands. It was probably the first one ever in Vinalhaven.

This particular merry-go-round was operated by manpower; a fellow in the center of the circle of wooden horses turned a crank and the contraption started to revolve, all to the accompaniment of much furnished by a bewhiskered fiddler who sawed out the notes, chewed tobacco, beating time with his foot.

It was a great event (I know because I was there) and except for

PACIFIC

Communique

by RICHARD HALLET,
Exclusive Gannett War
Correspondent in the Pacific Theater.

TO THE

GANNETT MAINE NEWSPAPERS

When we say "communique" we don't mean a technical, solemn report of the battle of the day. Instead, we mean the homespun, vibrant, "over-the-back-fence" news of Maine folks in the armed forces. Mr. Hallett's own personal experiences, his homely, day-to-day accounts, in the well-known Hallett style, are what we all read so avidly.

Watch for these "communiques." Read them! Live with Richard Hallett the episodes he reports so well and in which a friend of yours or a friend of a friend may be a leading character. The locale? Well—it might be any one of a score of Pacific places, a fighting ship, a lonely island beach, or who knows, even Japan as Mr. Hallett wanders the far flung battle theater in the quest of News for You.

Mrs. Bertha Sylvester was happily surprised when, after an appropriate speech by Mr. Beukelman, she was presented with a gift of a gold cross as a remembrance as she now attends the Rockport Society of Christian Service. Also Miss Doris Sylvester was surprised when given a green and white birthday cake which she cut and served. After refreshments and during the social hour, all had the opportunity to meet and chat with Mrs. Berry, an aged shut-in. The presence of Henry Beukelman, Ernest Reed, Ernest Benn and Charles Sylvester added to the pleasure of the afternoon. A surprise guest was Mrs. Alice Yeaton of Waterville.

CHURCHES

SERMONETTE

BURNING THE MORTGAGE

Sunday, June 3—I have just returned home from a singular service at the Immanuel Baptist Church, Portland. It followed the regular order, down to the point of the sermon; then by request, I delivered an historical address covering the 22 years following the merger of the two great Baptist congregations; the planning and building of the present parish house and church.

My topic was "Freedom from Debt." Twenty years ago at the request of the pastor I wrote a slogan "Let us build this church; consecrate it to the glory of God; dedicate it to humanity; and pay for it now." It took 22 years to compass that.

The pastor followed by an address "What This Ceremony Means." Then followed the actual burning of the note and mortgage, negotiated by the five trustees with the Casco Mercantile Trust Company for $150,000 signed by the then five trustees of which only two, Mr. Neal and the writer, are living. I think three, one moved away.

Did you ever witness the burning of a church mortgage? I never had. J. Fred Cheney, chairman of the trustees, and Albert E. Neal, moderator, held the mortgage over a silver plate, each holding one end of a copper wire. The pastor lit the match. Not being a smoker, he had difficulty in getting the match to burn. Finally the documents flared up brightly and were consumed. I do not know what the reaction of the congregation might have been, but frankly I was glad my name was off that $150,000 obligation.

Dr. Jones has been the pastor all these 22 years and resigned at the close of the Communion Service. This church and lot equipped cost $350,000. It represents the greatest adventure in faith among Protestants in the history of Maine. It is out of debt, and is endowed by trust funds of over $100,000. All in two decades.

William A. Holman

The sermon subject of Dr. William H. Walker at the Congregational Church service Sunday at 10:45, will be, "The Prophet Who Distanced the Chargers."

"God the Only Cause and Creator" is the subject of the lesson sermon that will be read in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, June 10. The Golden Text is, "Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created." (Revelation 4:11). The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "O come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our Maker." (Psalms 95:6).

At Pratt Memorial Methodist Church Rev. Alfred G. Hempstead will preach at 10:45 a. m. on the subject, "Dominant Concerns of Religious Life." The Church School will meet at noon. The Youth Fellowship and evening worship will be omitted because of the service in the Community Building for the graduation class of the High School. On Monday the Boy Scouts will meet at 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting will be held on Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. The Baraca Class will meet on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Ruth Ellingwood. The committee in charge of the program is Mrs. Ellingwood, Mrs. Lorita Bicknell and Mrs. Laura Buswell.

At the Church of the Nazarene Sunday the Church School will meet at 1:30. The speaker at 3 and 7:30 p. m. will be Rev. Joshua Wagner, pastor of the Portland Church of the Nazarene.

At the First Baptist Church at 10:15 the prayer meetings will be held preceding the morning service at 10:30. The children and the young people of the Church School will have charge of the morning service presenting a special Children's Day program. Parents will also bring children for a service of dedication. The classes of the Church School will meet at noon. Because of the High School Baccalaureate Service in the Community Building the Christian Endeavor meeting and the evening service will be omitted.

At the Universalist Church 10:40 a. m., Dr. Lowe gives the second in his series of sermons on "Getting Back to the Original Life and Teachings of Jesus." The kindergarten for younger children meets in the Children's room during the service of worship. The Church School will meet at noon for the purpose of a full rehearsal of the exercises for Children's Sunday, to be observed June 17. All children are requested to be present. There will be no meeting of the Youth Fellowship in the evening because all churches are uniting in the High School Baccalaureate service in the Community Building, 7:30 p. m. The Mission Circle will hold its June meeting and annual meeting in the vestry June 13, preceded by a covered dish luncheon at 12:30. Mrs. Angelica Glover will review "The Bible and the Common Reader" by Mary Ellen Chase.

"How Do We Know That Jesus is the Son of God?" will be the subject of the sermon by Rev. C. Wendell Wilson at the Littlefield Memorial Baptist Church Sunday at 10:30. Special music will include a solo by Miss Miriam Dorman. Sunday School follows at 11:45 with classes for all ages. Young Peoples meeting at 6 o'clock. No evening service. All are invited to attend the Baccalaureate service at the Community Building. Mid-week prayer and praise service Tuesday night at 7:30.

In the Episcopal parishes, Rev. E. O. Kenyon, rector, services at St. Peter's will be: Parish Mass and sermon at 9:30; at St. John's, Thomaston—Holy Eucharist at 8 a. m. and at St. George's, Long Cove—Vespers and sermon at 4 p. m.

At the Owl's Head Baptist Chapel, Rev. C. Wendell Wilson's theme for the Sunday afternoon service is "Jesus, the Son of God." Sunday School is at 1:30 p. m. It is encouraging to see the Sunday School growing under the leadership of able teachers. At the Thursday evening prayer service Rev. Mr. Wilson is beginning the study of the Book of Galatians. Come to the social at the Community Building at 8 p. m. Friday.

Farm Bureau Notes

Agricultural Notes

There will be a need for boys to enroll in the Victory Farm Volunteers for Summer work on Maine farms. Boys who apply for this work must weigh at least 115 pounds. Information on this program may be obtained at the Farm Labor Office in the Post Office Building, Rockland.

An Extension Service program for blueberry growers is being developed at the Extension Service Office, Orono, for the year 1946. The program will include meetings and demonstrations to be held in the blueberry growing areas of the State. Already much work is being done at the Experiment Station to find out what can be done to help the growers. With the exception of a few areas that were hit with the black army cut worm the blueberries look very well.

Orchardists are now applying the calyx spray on their apple trees. Already scab has appeared in some orchards. Lime sulphur and arsenate of lead is being used in these sprays.

A series of orchard meetings will be held in the State next week, starting Monday, with an inspection of Albert Washburn's orchard in Hampden at 4:30 p. m., followed by supper and a meeting in the evening. On Tuesday at Omer Gilbert's orchard in Wilton, Wednesday at 3:00 p. m. at the Geyer orchard in South Bridgton; Thursday at 4 p. m. at Norris Taylor's orchard in Monmouth and Friday at Clarence Conant's orchard in Hebron. Knox-Lincoln orchardists will probably be interested in either the meeting in Hampden or Monmouth. W. H. Thies of Massachusetts will be the speaker Oscar Wyman, crops specialist, and Dr. Frank Lathrop of the Experiment Station will be on the program. These meetings are being sponsored by the Maine Pomological Society and the Maine Extension Service of the University of Maine. Orchardists planning to attend and wish supper reservations should notify County Agent R. C. Wentworth, Rockland.

The home management leaders in these communities are: Mrs. Ruth Carney, Sheepscot; Mrs. Gertrude Munsey, Miss Isabelle Young, Hutton Hill; Mrs. Mabel Grundy, Damariscotta; Mrs. Alice Wadsworth, Appleton.

Seven sewing machines were cleaned, oiled and adjusted under the direction of the home demonstration agent, Joyce Johnson, at two clinics held in Burkettsville, May 31 and in Boothbay, June 1. Women who brought their machines were Mrs. Nettie Grinnell, Mrs. Doris Miller, Mrs. Alice Robbins Burkettsville and Mrs. Gwen Brown, Mrs. Hazel Blake, Mrs. Carrie Reed, and Mrs. Earle Gaw, Boothbay.

Martyred Poland!

"L. S." Calls Attention To Unfortunate Country's Plight

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—

Since the relations between Russia and Poland have become of paramount importance, it would be well to call to mind a few of the essential facts of Poland's unfortunate past. How unfortunate she has been, unprotected by any natural boundaries and surrounded by Russia, Germany, and Austria, is fully revealed by the course of her history in the past 200 years.

In 1772, there began a series of unprovoked aggressions against Poland, consisting of three consecutive partitions, instigated by Catherine of Russia, ably backed by Prussia, and gladly shared by Austria. The third last partition in 1795 ended Poland. She was divided like a pie into three parts, each neighbor seizing a part.

After this final partition Russia was in possession of two-thirds of Poland's territory, Prussia and Austria together of the remaining third. It must be repeated that these aggressions were unprovoked. They were brought about because in the weakness of Poland at that time her greedy and unscrupulous neighbors saw too good a chance to miss of aggrandizing themselves.

So that was the end of Poland, wiped off the map of Europe, obliterated. There was no Poland until, after the First World War, she was restored under President Wilson's 14 points, though not to anywhere near her original territory.

But not even this long submergence could destroy the vital spirit of Poland. During that time she contributed many famous Poles to the world, many who are well known to Americans: Paderewski, the greatest musician of his time; Chopin, one of the world's great composers of music; Sienkiewicz, whose novel Quo Vadis was an American best seller; and most famous of all the Curies, who discovered x-ray!

Now here is Poland after the Second World War, again the victim, not only of Germany by whom she was the most completely devastated of all the European nations, but again of Russia by whom she was invaded at the beginning of the war, and now most meanly betrayed by a trick which put Poland's leaders into Russia's cruel hands. Martyred Poland! Betrayed by the Fascists, Betrayed by the Socialists; if she is also betrayed by the Democracies, what will there be left in the world of honor, or even of common decency.
